

I. INTRODUCTION

A. PURPOSE OF THIS MANUAL

The Surveillance and Health Data Branch, Division of Epidemiology and Health Planning Department for Public Health (DPH), is the organizational unit charged with the responsibility of executing the statutory mandates regarding the reporting, surveillance and control of communicable diseases. These responsibilities are accomplished through the cooperative efforts of hospital infection control personnel, physicians, local health departments (LHD), the Kentucky Division of Laboratory Services (KDLS) and other health care providers.

Disease follow-up investigation forms are included in this manual and are a valuable tool for the investigator to interview a case or suspect case of disease. The follow-up investigation form outlines a minimum of demographic, clinical, epidemiologic and laboratory information needed to begin assessing public health implications of the case. Each follow-up report form provides a framework to determine the epidemiologic circumstances of the illness. Some follow-up forms have worksheets available to better assist the investigator.

All communicable disease case reports should be followed up for the purposes of prevention and control in a manner consistent with those methods listed in the current edition of Control of Communicable Diseases Manual, Chin, James, (ed), Washington, D.C.

The purpose of this manual is to provide a comprehensive resource document to assist local health departments and other health care providers in clarifying their responsibilities for disease reporting, epidemiologic surveillance and outbreak investigations. The manual should answer most of the procedural questions related to these activities. Questions beyond the scope of the desk reference should be directed to the attention of the State Epidemiologist or the Surveillance and Health Data Branch staff.
